Sustainability and Development in Latin America Autumn 2022

Course Readings

This document is posted online before the start of the course so that students may purchase or acquire course books in time for the course start. Course literature for Sustainability and Development in Latin America: Past, Present, and Future consists of two course books and a literature compilation.

The two course books are listed here and will be read in this order:

1. Galeano, E., 1973. Open veins of Latin America: five centuries of the pillage of a continent. London: Serpent's Tail.

FINISH READING by October 5th

2. Almeida, P., and Ulate Cordero, A., eds., 2015. Handbook of Social Movements across Latin America. Dordrecht: Springer.

FINISH READING by December 1st

The literature compilation contains articles and material from many different sources, carefully selected for each week's classes and activities. The Literature Compilation will be made available to you online via Studium one week before the course starts.

The books can be ordered online at Adlibris or Bokus, and may also be available at Akadamibokhandeln or Campusbokhandeln as well as other places. We recommend that you order course books as soon as possible, to ensure you have them when the course begins – especially if ordering online. Some of them may be available either at Ekonomikum or Geocentrum libraries (check online for availability). Certain books may even be available online, and you can check if the University Library website has them as e-books.
